TO HIS

ROYAL HIGHNESS

THE DUKE OF YORK.

SIR,

WITH the defign of ferving an amiable and worthy man, I have availed myself of your Royal Highness's permission to dedicate to you the translation of a work, which, as a faithful narrative of events, wants no additional comment to make it interesting. A detail of facts, in which your Royal Highness, in behalf of your country, has been so honourably engaged, may not prove unwelcome in aid of recollection; and a detail of facts, built on the experimental horrors of popular power, and which, proceeding from the

the wildness of theory to the madness of practice, has swept away every vestige of civil polity, and would soon leave neither law nor religion in the world, cannot, either in point of instruction or warning, be unseasonably laid before my fellow-citizens at large.

Under the fanction, therefore, Sir, of your illustrious name, I willingly commit to them this memorial. And if an innocent victim of oppression should thus derive a small, though painful, subsistence from a plain and publick recital of his country's crimes, I shall be abundantly repaid for the little share I may have had in bringing it into notice; and by the opportunity it affords me of subscribing myself and devoted humble fervant,

ERANCIS RANDOLPH.

BATH, July 22, 1796.

PREFACE.

THE following sheets contain a journal of the principal events of the French Revolution. The best authorities have been resorted to, and the facts are related without any comment. The reader will find a faithful outline of an interesting and momentous period of history, and will see how naturally each error produced its corresponding missortune.

Various causes contributed to effect a revolution in the minds of Frenchmen, and led the way to a revolution in the state. The arbitrary nature of the government had been long submitted to, and perhaps would have continued so much longer, if France had not taken part in the American war.

The perfidious policy of Vergennes, who, with a view of humbling the pride of England, affifted the fubject in arms against his Sovereign, soon imported into his own nation the seeds of liberty, which it had helped to cultivate in a country of rebellion; and the crown of France, as I once heard it emphatically observed, was lost in the plains of America.

The

In the mean time, that spirit of discussing philosophical subjects, which we have before mentioned, now fixed itself on politics. The people exclaimed against the weight of taxes, and the extravagance of courtiers; they complained of peculiar exemptions from the general burthens, and of grievances which arose from lettres-de-cachet, and other despotic powers of the government.

The King, defirous of yielding to the wishes of the people, recalled Monsieur Neckar to the administration, and in conformity to his advice, his Majesty declared his resolution of convening the statesgeneral. But in order to regulate all matters relative to the meeting of this important assembly, it was resolved to convoke the notables a second time. Among these, a diversity of opinion appeared respecting the comparative number of deputies to be sent by the Commons, and the two other orders; the cardinal point on which the whole success of the revolution eventually turned.* All the classes into which

^{*} The last assembly of the states general, which had been held in France in 1614, was composed of 140 deputies from the order of the clergy, among whom were five cardinals, seven archbishops, and 47 bishops; 132 representatives of the nobility; and 192 deputies from the commons. The Cardinal de Joyeuse was president of the clergy; the Baron Senecey of the nobility; and the president of the commons was Robert Miron, Prevot-de-Marchands, (an officer similar to that of mayor of Paris.)

which the notables were divided, decided for an equality of deputies, except those in which Monsieur and the Duke of Orleans presided.

In these, it was agreed that the representatives of the commons should be equal in number to those of the other two states. The ministry were of opinion that this double representation was adviseable, and persuaded themselves that, through their weight and influence they should be able to prevent any mischies to be apprehended from this preponderance of the tiers-etat. By their advice, the King issued an ordinance in January 1789, throughout the whole kingdom, commanding the people to assemble in their bailiwicks, and to nominate deputies to represent them in the states-general; viz. 300 for the clergy, 300 for the nobility, and 600 for the commons.

HAC FONTE DERIVATA CLADES.

N. B. The first legislature, which was called the National Assembly, has now the name of the "Con-"stituent Assembly."

The fecond is called the "Legislative Assembly;" and the third legislature is called "the National "Convention."

JUDGMENT

LOUIS XVI.

IN the National Convention of France,* on the 17th, 18th, and 19th days of January, 1793, the three following questions were successively put to the vote.

QUESTION THE FIRST.

Is LOUIS guilty or not?

Of the 745 members of the Convention, 20 were absent, 5 sick, 27 gave modified opinions, 693 voted in the affirmative.

Prefident—" I declare in the name of the National "Convention LOUIS CAPET to be found guilty ^{*} N.B. In this Convention, 76 were ex-nobles; between 50 and 60 ex-priests; the rest confissed of lawyers, merchants, husbandmen, and a great number of artisans, men who had no property, but what they acquired by spoil from the rich.

" of a conspiracy against the liberty of the nation, and of an attempt to disturb the public security."

QUESTION THE SECOND.

Shall the fentence to be passed upon LOUIS be referred to the sanction of the people?

The refult of the appel nominal on this question was; 3 fick; 20 absent; 10 refused to vote; 283 voted for, and 424 against it.

Prefident—" I declare in the name of the National "Convention, that its fentence shall not be submitted, "to an appeal to the people."

QUESTION THE THIRD.

What punishment shall be inslicted upon LOUIS?

The appel nominal for the definitive fentence, by DEPARTMENTS.

N. B. The first column expresses the name and quality of the voters; the second, the manner in which they gave their votes; in the third, those who voted for death absolutely are distinguished by the mark +; those for death with restrictions as to the time, by the letter D; those for detention, banishment, &c. by the letter O; absentees (a); not voted, by (n v); sick by (m); the sourth column shews the sate or punishment of many of the members; A signifying assignment of guillotined; I imprisoned; M massacred; P proscribed; and S suicides.

THE APPEAL OF LOUIS XVI.

"I OWE it to my honour, I owe it to my family, not to subscribe to an accusation which I have not merited. I declare therefore, that I bring an appeal to the nation at large from the judgment passed against me; and I give to my defenders all necessary powers, in order that this present appeal may be inserted in the Journals of the Convention."

Refused!

The Address of Monf. de Seze, one of the defenders of the King, to the Convention.

"THE ratification by the French people, which Louis demands, is the exercise of a natural and facred right which belongs to every person accided; it is the right of every man, and consequently of Louis. If we did not prefer this claim in his defence, it was because it was not in our power to foresee that the National Convention would resolve upon judging him; or, if it did judge him, that it would condemn him. We now learn, that the satal decree, which condemns Louis to death,

"death, has been carried by a majority of five votes only. Permit me, Citizens, to represent to you, in the name of humanity, in the name of that facred principle which calls for every mitigation in factorial vour of the accused, that this circumstance, fo very extraordinary, may well engage you voluntarily to accede to the proposed ratification. I demand it in the name of justice, in the name of our country, in the name of humanity. Exercise your own high powers; but do not astonish France by the exhibition of a judgment that must appear terrible, when the surprising minority comes to be considered.

"Citizens, permit me to adjure you once more in the name of Louis XVI. and to conclude with fuggesting to you, whether, whilst you are contending for the security of the nation, and its real interest, you will not tremble, when you restect, that the safety of the republic, the security of the French empire, and the happiness of 25 millions of people, may possibly depend upon five votes."

FOURTH APPEL NOMINAL.

THE object of this fourth appeal was to know whether the execution of Louis might be deferred; 310 were for respite, and 380 against it. Thus, by a majority of 70 votes, it was decreed, that the sentence against Louis XVI. should be executed without delay.

THE EXECUTION OF LOUIS XVI.

21st JANUARY, 1793.

THE minister of justice and the heads of the administrative corps, having proceeded to the Temple on Sunday the 20th of January, about four in the evening, notified to Louis the warrant for his execution. "I demand," faid the King, "a respite " of three days to prepare myfelf for appearing be-" fore God. To affift me in this work, I defire to " have Mr. Edgeworth, (an Irish clergyman) with " whom I may freely communicate. I defire that " he may be fecured from all uneafinefs, or appre-66 henfion, on account of this charitable office which 66 he shall perform for me. I defire to be relieved " from that perpetual watch which the council-ge-" neral has fet over me for fome days. I demand " in this interval the privilege of feeing my family "when I shall defire it, and without witnesses. I "could also wish, that the Convention would, as " fpeedily as may be, fet about determining the fate " of my family, and permit them to fee each other " freely and commodiously, when they shall think 66 proper.

"I recommend to the liberality of the nation all those persons who have been attached to me. "Among my pensioners there are many aged men, women, and children, who have no other means of subsistence."

Of all these requisitions Louis obtained only that of seeing his family without witnesses. It was the first time since his imprisonment. The interview lasted two hours. It is impossible to express the horror of the moment, when he was obliged to tear himself away from them. On his return to his apartment, the King passed almost the whole of the night in prayer. He then laid down and slept a few hours, and early in the morning betook himself again to prayer.

The 21st of January, at half past eight o'clock, Santerre, the commandant-general, came to signify to Louis the order for his going to execution. Having requested three minutes to speak with his confessor, he then turned to Santerre, and told him that he was ready to follow him.

The King croffed the first court of the Temple on foot; he then entered the coach of Pethion, the mayor of Paris, with his Confessor and two Gendarmes. His route lay along the Boulevards, which were lined with above two hundred thousand men in arms. All the way Louis was deeply engaged in reading the prayers appointed for persons at the point of death.

Being arrived at the Place de Louis XV. which was the place of execution, about ten o'clock in the morning, he alighted from the carriage with calmness, took off his clothes himself, remaining in his white under-waistcoat, untied his cravat, and opened the collar of his shirt; he then threw himself upon his knees to receive the last benediction of his Confessor, got up immediately after, and ascended the scaffold alone. At that moment his Confessor cried out to him, "Son of St. Louis, you are going up "to Heaven!";

Far from opposing those who came to cut off his hair, and bind his hands, "Do with me," said he, "what you will, it is the last facrifice." He then made a motion with his hand to obtain silence.—"I "die perfectly innocent of all the pretended crimes "laid to my charge—I forgive all those who have had any hand in my misfortunes, and I pray that "my blood may be of use in restoring happiness to "France—and you, unhappy people!".....

At these words, the unseeling Santerre gave orders that the drums should beat, crying out to the King, "that he had not brought him there to de-"claim, but to die." At that instant his head was severed from his body!.....

The corpfe was immediately conveyed to the Magdalene burying-ground, and thrown into a pit twelve feet deep, into which a confiderable quantity of quicklime was cast.

[†] Other accounts state, that it was when the King had just prepared himself for the stroke of the statal instrument, that Mons. Edgeworth, his confessor, called out (in the imperative) with a loud voice, "Ensant de Saint Louis, montez au Ciel." "Son of St. Louis, mount "up to Heaven."

It is faid, that after crying out, "Vive la Nation!" "Vive la Republique!" fome volunteers dipped their pikes, and others their handkerchiefs, in the blood of the victim. One person alone had the courage to cry out, Grace, and was instantly cut down with a fabre.

Thus died Louis XVI. King of France and Navarre. He was born the 23d of August, 1754, ascended the throne the 10th of May, 1774, and reigned eighteen years and three months.

The following dates relative to the deftiny of this prince have been brought together and contrasted.

21st April, 1770, Marriage of Louis at Vienna, and delivery of the ring.

21st June, 1770, Great rejoicings at Paris on account of his marriage.

21st January, 1772, Festival doings in the city on account of the birth of the first Dauphin.

21st June, 1791, The King's departure, or rather flight to Varennes.

21st September, 1792, Abolition of Royalty.

21st January, 1793, Louis beheaded.

THE LAST WILL OF LOUIS XVI.

IN the name of the most holy Trinity, Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, this day, the 25th of December, 1792, I, Louis XVI. by name, King of France, having been four months shut up with my family in the Tower of the Temple, at Paris, by those who were my subjects, and deprived of all communication whatever, even, since the 11th of this month, with my family; being moreover involved in a trial, of which it is impossible to foresee the issue, on account of the passions of men, and for which there is no pretence nor motive in any existing law, having none but God for witness to my thoughts, and to whom I can address myself, I here declare, in his presence, my last will and sentiments.

I leave my foul to God my creator; I befeech him to receive it in his mercy; not to judge it according to its merits, but to those of our Lord Jesus Christ, who offered himself as a facrifice to God his Father for us men, unworthy of it as we are, and I more than any.

I die in the faith of our holy mother the catholic, apostolic. and Roman Church, which derives her powers in an uninterrupted fuccession from St. Peter, to whom Jesus Christ had entrusted them; I firmly believe and acknowledge all that is contained in the apostles' creed, the commandments of God, and of the church; the facraments and mysteries, such as the Catholic Church teaches, and has always taught them: I never pretended to be a judge of the different modes of explaining the dogmas which divide the church of Jesus Christ; but I have always trusted. and shall always trust, if God grants me life, to the decisions that the ecclefiastical superiors, together with the holy catholic church, give and shall give, according to the discipline of the church fince Jesus Christ. I pity with all my heart our brethren who may be in error, but I do not pretend to judge them; nor do I love them the less in Jesus Christ, according to what christian charity teaches us, and I pray God to forgive me all my fins: I have fcrupuloufly fought to know them, to detest them, and to humble humble myself in his presence. Not being permitted to make use of the ministry of a catholic priest, I pray God to receive the confession which I have made to him of them; and above all, my fincere repentance for having put my name (though against my will) to acts that may be contrary to the discipline and faith of the catholic church, to which I have always been sincerely and saithfully united. I pray God to accept my firm resolution, if he grants me life, to make use as soon as possible of the ministry of a catholic priest, that I may accuse myself of all my sins, and receive the sacrament of penance. I beseech all those whom I may have inadvertently offended, (for I do not remember to have knowingly given offence to any person) and those to whom I may have given bad examples, or caused scandal, to forgive the injuries they think I may have done them.

I implore all charitable perfons to join their prayers to mine, to obtain from God the pardon of my fins; I, with all my heart, forgive those who are become my enemies, although I have not given them any reason to be so; and I beseech God to forgive them, as well as those who, through a salse or mistaken zeal, have brought many misfortunes on me.

I recommend to God, my wife and children; my fifters, my aunts, my brothers, and all those who are attached to me, either by the ties of blood, or in any other way whatever. I particutarly beseech God to cast a merciful eye on my wife, my children, and my fifter, who have long suffered with me, to support them by his grace, if they should happen to lose me, and as long as they remain in this perishable world.

I recommend my children to my wife; I never doubted her maternal tenderness for them. I above all recommend to her to make them good christians, and honest people; to make them consider the grandeurs of this world (if they be condemned to possess them) only as dangerous and perishable possessions, and to direct their attention to Eternity, the only folid and durable glory. I beg of my sister to continue her tenderness to my children, and to be a mother to them, if they should have the misfortune of losing her who is such.

I intreat my wife to forgive me all the afflictions she suffers for my sake, and the sorrows I may have given her in the course of our union; as she may be certain that I have no fault to find with her, even where she may think she has cause to reproach herself.

I earnestly recommend to my children, after what they owe to God, (which is the first of all duties) to live always in harmony with one another, to be submissive and obedient to their mother, and grateful to her for all the care and trouble she takes for them out of regard to my memory. I desire them to consider my sister as their second mother.

I recommend to my Son, if he has the misfortune to become King, to remember that he owes himself entirely to his fellow citizens; that he must forget all hatred and resentment, and particularly all that relates to the misfortunes and afflictions that I endure; that he can only make the people happy by reigning according to the laws, but at the same time, that a King cannot make himself respected, and do all the good he wishes, without having the necessary authority; and that otherwise, being restrained in his operations, and not inspiring respect, he is rather hurtful than useful.

I recommend to my fon to take as much care of all those perfons who were attached to me, as the circumstances he may be in will allow him; to recollect that it is a facred debt which I have contracted towards the children or the relations of those who have died for me, and those who suffer for my sake. I know that there are several persons among those who ought to have been attached to me, who have not acted towards me as they ought, and have even been ungrateful towards me; but I forgive them, (often in time of trouble and consusion, men are not masters of themselves) and I beg my son, if he finds the opportunity, to think only of their missortunes.

I wish I could here give a testimony of my gratitude to those who have shewn a true and disinterested affection for me. If, on the one hand, I have been sensibly affected with the ingratitude and disloyalty of those, to whom I had shewn at all times only kindness.

kindness—to them, their relations, or friends; on the other hand, I have had the confolation to receive proofs of disinterested affection and regard from several others. I beg them to accept my best thanks.

In the present state of things, I should sear to expose them if I spoke more explicitly; but I particularly recommend to my son to embrace every opportunity of discovering them.

Nevertheless, I think I should wrong the national feeling, if I were not openly to recommend to my son Messieurs De Chamilly and Hue, whose sincere affection for me induced them to shut themselves up with me in this melancholy abode, and who ran the risque of being the unfortunate victims of their attachment. I also recommend Cleri, with whose attentions I have had all reasons to be satisfied ever since he has been with me. As he is the person who has remained with me to the last, I request Messieurs de la Commune to give him my clothes, my books, and the other trisses which have been deposited at the Council of the Commune.

I also very willingly forgive those who guarded me, for their ill treatment, and the constraint which they thought necessary to keep me under. I have found some feeling and compassionate minds; may they enjoy in their hearts the pleasure that their turn of thinking must afford them.

- I request Messieurs De Malsherbes, Tronchet, and De Seze, to receive my best thanks, and assurances of my gratitude for all the care and attention they have shewn me.

I conclude with declaring before Gon, being ready to appear before him, that I cannot reproach myself with any of those crimes that have been laid to my charge.

Made and copied in the Tower of the Temple, the 25th of December, 1792.

(Signed) · LOUIS.

And underligned BEAUDRAIS, Municipal Officer.
